

DIPLOMATS PLAN FOR THEIR SUMMER EXODUS

Russian Ambassador Only One of His Rank to Make Newport His Headquarters.

OTHERS WIDELY SCATTERED

Several Will Locate Within Easy Reach of the President, and Some Will Go to the Pacific Coast.

[From the Tribune Bureau.]
Washington, June 1.—Even the tariff has failed to reconcile members of the diplomatic corps to a hot summer in Washington, and the signal for the exodus to New England and other resorts has already been given.

The Russian Ambassador is the only diplomat of his rank who has chosen Newport for a summer embassy, but Hansel von Haimhausen, counsellor of the German Embassy, will go there in a few days. The Danish Minister, Constantin Brun, has also chosen Newport for a summer home.

The Netherland Minister and Mme. London are going to Bar Harbor this week, and will establish the legation there for the summer.

Within easy reach of Boston and the summer White House, in Cornish, N. H., will be the Turkish Ambassador, Youseff Zia Pacha, who has taken a place at Beverly for the summer with his son and daughter-in-law, Ibrahim Zia Bey, second secretary, and Mme. Zia Bey.

At Manchester, within easy motoring distance of the summer White House, the Ambassador from Austria-Hungary, Constantin Theodor Dunik, has established his household, and will be joined by Commander Maximilian Burstyn, naval attaché; Konstantin von Masirevich, first secretary, and Baron Karl von Freudenthal.

Near the Summer White House.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, Ambassador from Great Britain, has chosen as an embassy Fyne-Y-Maes, the summer place of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jeffrey Parsons, at Dublin, N. H. He will meet Lady Spring-Rice and their children in Boston on June 5, and they will go at once to Dublin.

Alfred Mitchell Innes, counsellor of the British Embassy, chose a home in that section last summer, and will probably do so again this summer. Mrs. Grant, wife of the British naval attaché, has just sailed from New York and Captain Heathcoat S. Grant will soon join her in England. The military attaché and Mrs. Moreton F. Gage have taken a place at Seabright. Lord Eustace Percy will go to a resort near Dublin.

The French Ambassador will be late in leaving for Europe, being detained by tariff matters, but it is quite likely that he and Mme. Jusserand will sail for France by July 1. The counsellor of the embassy, De Peretti de la Rocca, will be chargé d'affaires, and will keep within easy reach of the capital. He and Countess de Peretti de la Rocca have taken a cottage at Deer Park, Md. The military attaché and Countess de Chambrun will join the large Washington colony at the Virginia Hot Springs, where they will be with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, mother of the countess.

The Russian Embassy staff is widely divided, but two of the bachelors, Mr. Lysakovskiy, first secretary, and Mr. Yonine, second secretary, have taken a New-port cottage.

The Italian Ambassador is undecided as to his summer home.

COUNT von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, will spend some time in New-port before returning to Germany for the summer. Baron Kurt von Lersner and Baron Horst von Lersner will spend the season at Newport.

Will Remain in Washington.

VISCONTI Chinda, Ambassador from Japan, has never established an embassy outside of Washington and has no intention of doing so this season. He will, however, make a series of visits to friends at resorts.

The Mexican Embassy has never been closed for the summer since its establishment here. Mr. Algarra, chargé d'affaires, will make short visits to friends.

The Minister from Peru and Mme. De Pez left the capital to-day for San Francisco, where the minister will select a site for the Peruvian exhibit at the Panama Canal Exposition. They will visit many of the points of interest in California and the West, and will be absent all summer.

Prince Trajdos Prabandi, Minister of Siam, and his suite have already left the capital, and after a visit in New York will go to Eastern Point, Gloucester, Mass., where for years the Siamese Legation has been located during the summer.

The Swedish Minister and Mme. Eken-gren will spend the summer abroad, as will also the Swiss Minister and Mme. Ritter and the Belgian Minister and Mme. Havenith.

The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Bryn have taken a cottage at Seal Harbor, Me., for the summer.

Drawn to Pacific Coast.

Several of the South and Central American diplomats will go to the Pacific Coast this summer to select sites for their respective government exhibits at the Panama exposition. Señor Don Eduardo Suarez of Chile, will leave Washington on this mission on June 15 and Señora Dona Leonor Orrego de Suarez will accompany him.

Mrs. Naon, wife of the Argentine Minister, has already gone to Buena Vista Springs and taken a cottage for the season, and the minister will soon join her there.

The Brazilian Embassy will soon be left in the hands of Mr. Chernoff, first secretary. Ambassador da Gama will go abroad to join Mme. da Gama.

The Bolivian Minister and Señora B. Moneda de Calderon and Señorita Elena Calderon, their daughter, will leave Washington on June 10, and will sail from New York on June 12 for Europe.

The Chinese Minister and Mme. Chang will again take a place on the Hudson.

The Spanish Minister and Señora de Riano have made no choice yet of a summer home, but it is likely they will go either to Newport or Bar Harbor, and the legation of Greece is also likely to be in one of those two places.

A Scherbatko, counsellor of the Russian Embassy, has taken a cottage at Cataumet, Mass., and Mme. Scherbatko and their children have already gone there. Not far removed from them, at Falmouth Heights, on Cape Cod, are the Russian military attaché, Colonel Nicolai Goljewski and Mme. Goljewski and their children. The Russian naval attaché and Mme. Vassiloff will sail from New York on June 5, and will spend the summer in Russia.

BACCALAUREATES IN CITY UNIVERSITIES

Impressive Ceremonies at Delivery of Annual Sermon at Columbia.

HISTORIC PRAYER USED

The Right Rev. Thomas Frank Gaylor, Bishop of Tennessee, Preaches to Big Crowd in Gymnasium Auditorium.

One of the most impressive ceremonies in the 159 years of Columbia University's history was held in the university gymnasium yesterday afternoon, when nearly two thousand graduates assembled for the annual baccalaureate service. The Right Rev. Thomas Frank Gaylor, Bishop of Tennessee, preached the sermon before a big congregation, that included, in addition to the graduates and their friends, the faculty, officers and trustees of the university.

The Columbia campus, on the crest of Morningside Heights, was an inspiring sight as the historic academic procession slowly moved down the steps of the great library and toward the gymnasium. The sombre black gowns of the students formed a background against which the silken robes of the members of the teaching staff glistened as the procession advanced.

Although the services were not to begin until 4 o'clock, parents and friends of the candidates for degrees began to gather as early as 2 o'clock, and by the time the procession was scheduled to form the vast auditorium of the gymnasium was filled and a hundred or more persons were waiting outside. The procession then filed in while the orchestra played Mendelssohn's "Priests' March." The officers, professors and trustees took chairs on the platform, with President Nicholas Murray Butler and Bishop Gaylor in the centre.

The Rev. Raymond C. Knox, chaplain of the university, offered the opening prayer, using the form which the Rev. Samuel Johnson, first president of Columbia, then known as King's College, used when the college was opened, in 1754. Bishop Gaylor began his sermon after the singing of the Columbia anthem, taking as his text the twelfth of the seventeenth verses of the first book of St. Paul's epistle to the Colossians.

In part, Bishop Gaylor's sermon was as follows:

"The law of Christ is the law of service, and the spirit of Christ is the spirit of sacrifice, and no man can call himself a Christian who is not doing some service and making some sacrifice."

"And the contrast between this ideal of life and the world's ideal is drawn more sharply to-day perhaps than ever before in history."

"We are still invited to the service of a world which is just big enough and kind enough and near enough to meet the desires of the natural man—to give him recognition of his talents, reward for his activity, pleasure for his appetites and complacent satisfaction with himself as he is. To those who have the force of will and the strength of mind and body this world gives its prizes with a free hand, and its God is not so big and mysterious as to puzzle the intellect with difficult questions; and its present success fills the conscience to sleep over the possibilities of the future. To the men and women who are worshipping the God of this world philanthropic interests are the mere aftermath of later life or the concessions to a custom which self-love finds gratifying and expedient."

To-day will see the beginning of the student celebration of commencement. The senior class of Columbia College will have its annual exercises at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and at their conclusion the seniors will be the guests of the ladies of the university at a tea in Earl Hall. The evening will be given over to the senior dance in the gymnasium. The Phi Beta Kappa society will have its annual meeting in the afternoon, with a dinner at the faculty club in the early evening and an open meeting in Scherzer Hall at 8 o'clock, at which Professor Felix E. Schelling, of the University of Pennsylvania, will deliver the annual oration.

STATE TO ISSUE NOTES

Will Raise $27,000,000 in That

Way for the First Time.

[By Telegraph to the Tribune.]

ALBANY, June 1.—The State Controller, for the first time in the history of the state, is arranging for the issue of short term notes, redeemable from the proceeds of a sale of fifty-year bonds. The money raised in this way will relieve the situation caused by the shortage in the canal funds. Otherwise no money would have been available for the carrying on of canal contracts after to-day, and the state was in danger of defaulting on many of these contracts.

The issue of short term notes is made possible by legislation just enacted, which will permit the state to dispose of its long term bonds under the most favorable market conditions.

The Controller announces that on June 5 he will receive proposals for $27,000,000 of notes maturing on February 1, 1914, and dispose of them to the bidders who will agree to purchase at the lowest rate of interest. The sale of these notes will defer any sale of state bonds until the early part of 1914.

Washington, June 1.—The "rural organization service," a new branch of the Department of Agriculture, which includes a division of markets, will begin actual operation to-morrow with the arrival of Dr. Thomas N. Carver, of Harvard University, head of the service. Two of Dr. Carver's assistants will be Dr. Carl W. Thompson, of Minnesota, who has been making studies in that state of rural social and economic conditions, and L. H. Goddard, who has been studying farm management in Ohio.

Mrs. Naomi, wife of the Argentine Minister, has already gone to Buena Vista Springs and taken a cottage for the season, and the minister will soon join her there.

The Brazilian Embassy will soon be left in the hands of Mr. Chernoff, first secretary. Ambassador da Gama will go abroad to join Mme. da Gama.

The Bolivian Minister and Señora B. Moneda de Calderon and Señorita Elena Calderon, their daughter, will leave Washington on June 10, and will sail from New York on June 12 for Europe.

ALLEGED BLACKMAILERS VICTIMS OF OWN PLOT

Faculty and Students Attend Annual Exercises at New York University.

MUSIC BY VESTED CHOIR

The Rev. Dr. Charles Reynolds Brown, Dean of Yale Divinity School, Preaches Sermon to Large Audience.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Woodbury, N. Y., June 1.—That Joseph J. Summerill, Prosecutor of Pleas of Gloucester County, and his three associates on the bondholders' committee of the failed Moore Brothers Glass Company at Clayton, walked into the trap which they had set themselves in their alleged blackmailing plot to extort $150,000 from relatives of Charles C. Moore to cover up a supposed embezzlement, is the declaration made by David Wilson Moore, Jr., a rich retired glass manufacturer. He caused the arrest of the four men after a sensational scene in a room wired for dictaphones by Burns Detectives at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, on Saturday.

Charles Moore worked with the glass company for several years as a clerk and paymaster, finally, upon the reorganization of the concern in 1902, being allotted some stock and made secretary.

"My brother Charles was himself never approached by the bondholders' committee with respect to his alleged shortage of $8,000," said David Moore.

[Family Ready to "Make Good."]

"It was on the first Monday night in May, when Joseph Best came to me and told me," says Mr. Moore, "that accountants in going over the books of the glass company, which was placed in the hands of a receiver in 1911, had discovered an alleged shortage against my brother. This, he said, amounted to about $8,000."

"I told him," said Mr. Moore, "that if such was the case the other members of the family would make good the deficiency. He said that the committee would not be satisfied with mere restitution. It was early intimated that Prosecutor Summerill had knowledge of the evidence against my brother which the bondholders' committee claimed to be in possession of, and that if the family was to save its good name it would be expected to guarantee the glass company's $20,000 in bonds and pay the committee $5,000 for its expenses."

"This is the sum specified in the agreement drawn up, I suppose, by Prosecutor Summerill that I signed just before the men were arrested. Well, when the proposition was first put up to me I made a hurried trip to Colorado Springs and consulted with my father. We then believed and still believe my brother innocent of any crime, and we decided to fight the attempted extortion."

"Upon my return I had a talk with friends, and through their advice engaged Burns Detectives. My home at Clayton was secretly wired for dictaphones, and I had a conference with the members of the bondholders' committee. Nothing of consequence happened, but we arranged for another conference at Philadelphia. In the mean time I received information that the case against my brother would very likely be presented before the grand jury at the May term of court."

[How "Trap" Was Set.]

"I asked for more time, and received a letter from Mr. Best, in which he said that I would be given up to the end of the month. After my lawyers had gone over the notes taken during the stenographic transcription of our conversation over the dictaphone last week, they decided that the evidence was sufficient to make an arrest, but thought best to have a final conference, at which I was to request a signed statement from the committee."

I went to Paterson on Friday night to purposely to the meeting that took place yesterday afternoon. I tried an hour to get the connection, but was unable to do so, and had to trust to telegraph. The public already had heard the story of what happened after we went to room No. 124 at the Bellevue."
